However, the book lists you where to get a variety of other free things, ranging from instructions how to market a song of rare value to tickets for television

Free Money, Stamps

The free money? Negotiate with the free countries—Australia, Japan and Asia, supplied by a firm of coin dealers which carries in collection. You can get stamps from $1 a stamp down.

"You've a Song to Publish," a book by Norman Rosenberg contains tips on marketing songs, and other useful information for composers. You can get it from Alton Books, 200 Avenue New York. No Mr. Rosenberg said I don't doubt his word. This is the second volume of the book.

You can write to the U.S. Department of the Interior, Fish and Wildlife Service, Washington 25, D.C. and request Wildlife Service, 330.

Games for Children

Children don't care for acrobatic and travel song books. A book called "Find Travel Games" tells you how to keep children amused on the road. It lists more than 20 games to play in a car, including Travel Plans, Variations, Nature Census, and Farm Animals. It comes from Information Section, Ford Motor Co., 2000 Schaefer Road, Dearborn, Michigan.

Mr. Wengert's book also tells you how to write for information about driving a car in other countries, how to get free tickets in television shows in Hollywood and free travel Broadway shows in New York, and how to get a free trip to Europe by signing up free friends to buy tickets from a certain travel agency and go with you.

Ladies' Lullaby Foundation, 819, Cleveland St., will send a booklet, "What Shall I Name My Baby?" containing an alphabetical list of names of happily named babies.

From various travel agencies you can get travel past cards which are works of art.

Economists Urge Britain:

'Join in Prosperity or Decline Alone'

(LONDON (AP)—An independent

recommended Tuesday (11) Britain take all possible steps to join in the European free trade area.

It said the choice may determine whether the nation will share with the Continent in a growing prosperity or face isolation in the prospects of economic stagnation.

EXAMINED THEM

This was the finding of the Economist Intelligence Unit which was commissioned by the British and

United Kingdom to study the significance for Britain of the growing trend toward economic integration in Europe.

The results of the 10-month study, which was headed by leading British economist, industrial and economist, was published in a 209-page book entitled Britain and Europe.

NOTHING TO LOSE

The group concluded that in any world plan, particularly in agriculture, even if it comes to nothing, it will have nothing to lose.

The researchers noted that six countries—West Germany, France, Italy, the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg—have already moved to bring Europe into being by 1970. The European free trade area, which would bring these and approximately a dozen nations into a unified economic area, is still in the planning and negotiating stages.

Canada's Basic Trend to Growth

"There is every reason to be optimistic about the long-term outlook for Canada and, in short term, elements of stability should be sources of reassurance," said Neil J. McKinnon, President, addressing the 91st Annual Meeting of The Canadian Bank of Commerce.

When we start a year ago the economic atmosphere both at home and abroad was one of gloom. There was an air of static demand, growing too heavily on available supplies of materials and labour with the inevitable consequence of marked upward pressure on prices.

The economic environment of today is in noticeable contrast to the stagnant atmosphere of a year ago. The Gross National Product began to level off about mid-year and for the full year probably rose only slightly above the 1956 level. Wholesale prices early in the year developed a declining tendency and the term seems now to be gradually reflected in consumer prices which recently have been most of their upward impulse. Evidence of the changed pace of the economy is also to be seen in reduced freight car loadings, a cutback in petroleum production to under one half of capacity, a leveled rate of growth in consumption of electric energy and a lowered volume of industrial production. The value of shipments to external markets so far, somewhat exceeds that in the corresponding period of last year. Consumer expenditure continues at a high level although there is some indication that the pace of increase is slowing. While the number of unemployed has increased in a year, the labour force has shown a marked increase, employment continues at a higher level than last year.

There has emerged during the year a new evidence of a condition that has been building up for some time but which had been concealed by demands for abnormally rapid industrial expansion and government stockpiling a situation in which capacity is equal to and in many cases in excess of current effective demand for all forms of consumer and capital goods and services. Prices of many commodities which are freely traded in world markets declined noticeably in 1956, partly due to increasing production in relation to demand and partly due to a reversal of the stock-piling policies of other governments related to sales contracts to purchase. Some other commodities, the prices of which have been maintained by government support, have also shown weakness, as, for example, wheat. These have been able to hold the price which their domestic producers have given them. This is a more satisfactory trend in the United States in its international trade policies for agricultural products.

The accumulating evidence suggests that 1956 will mark the fourth time since the end of the Second World War that the Canadian economy will have passed through a period of significant adjustment. Each of these adjustments differs from the others in pattern and degree. The first in 1946 represented the transition both domestically and internationally from war to peace-time conditions; the second in 1949 reflected some slackening in the recovery from the depression followed by new stresses on the economy generated by the Korean conflict; the third in 1954 represented temporary adjustments in production and consumption. We have come through another upswing with many gains. The historical months of 1955 and 1956 have experienced a high plateau for the economy. In 1957, although statistical indications show that the economy has begun to level off, the picture is far from bleak. It is a picture of a country which is taking place while in others there continues to be a steady if unexpected advance. We now appear to be entering a period of consolidation following this period of rapid advance during the past two years.

During periods of this kind there are always doubts and misgivings about the future. It is the case in the several previous readjustments since the end of the Second World War. Although from the author's point of view there is probably no serious question as to whether we should not continue to grow as rapidly as an attempt to forecast the future leads to reasons why we should not adhere to our growth in the year 1958 and consider some of the major factors influencing the economy. The three main ones which must be kept under scrutiny are export trade, new capital investment and consumer expenditure.

In the case of external trade, although the pace of a number of new materials has declined and to a degree the terms of trade have turned against Canada, the aggregate effect of value of exports still holds up well.

The future trend depends on the level of domestic activity in other nations and especially in the United States. Although there are indications of increasing export demand for some products, export shipments of goods have not risen since 1954. As exports last year exceeded $4,800,000,000 and imports exceeded $5,700,000,000 in relation to a Gross National Product of nearly $30,000,000,000, it is evident how important external trade is to domestic activity.

The total capital investment for 1957 is estimated to approach $8.7 billion, an increase of $800 million over 1956 and $2.3 billion over 1955. There are some indications that the total capital expenditures for 1958 will not be as great but this year's total is more than 28% above the total for 1956. It is a very high one indeed and is at a level which could not reasonably be expected to be maintained. Although the composition of capital investment will change, the total for 1958 will undoubtedly be a very large one by comparison with any year prior to 1956.

Consumer expenditures, which represent nearly two-thirds of the Gross National Product, continue at a high level although the pace of increase has slackened. This is a trend not only by available income but by spending attitudes. Aggregate expenditures in 1957 are expected to be higher than in 1956, but a year ago while the ratio of consumer expenditures to income is still high.

Canadians have in recent years shown a marked disposition to spend. In 1954 for example, consumer expenditure rose continuously at a time when there was a noticeable easing in other categories of expenditures. Between 1952 and 1956 consumer expenditures increased by more than 8% and in the early quarters of 1957 this rate was continued but at a slower rate. It is likely that the final figure for the year will show a leveling off but that we shall enter 1958 with a level of consumer expenditures considerably above any year prior to 1957.

Looking further to the future, probably one of the significant influences on the amount of gross private investment will be the level of corporate profits. Gross private investment has an important mark against it in that it is a function of corporate earnings. The plans and operations of all business but also contribute to personal income without in the first instance adding a corresponding amount of consumer goods or services to the production side of national transactions. This year has witnessed a shrinkage in the profit margin of a number of industries, investment plans are, of course, made in anticipation of adequate earnings on the investment and where the prospects are not promising such plans are likely to be deferred. Many industries are facing conditions of rising costs while selling prices under competitive pressures cannot be raised. Income in such a position leads to a necessary curbing of investment and this can be seen in the way that investment in new plant is being held back in many industries.

In dollar terms, private expenditures for new industrial and commercial buildings, and for equipment, have more than doubled since 1950. During 1957, non-residential construction continued to increase, but expenditures on machinery and equipment showed some signs of slowing a little. In becoming more and more a part of the picture of the economy it is doubtful if output of new houses and homes will show any significant increase in 1957. It will still represent a very high rate of housing expenditure.

Investment expenditure on goods and services which cover about a billion dollars of public investment has been held up and has continued to increase over 1956 level. As governments are spending in the aggregate, it can be seen that public programs hold an important place in the economy as well as the political field. The portion of public investment which goes into roads, schools, public utilities and into water transportation facilities is one of the important influences in the economy because of the importance of these facilities in the national life. The importance of the contribution of the public to the national life is one of the important influences in the economy because of the importance of these facilities in the national life.

Although many natural resources and industrial developments require a large amount of capital, which could only come from foreign sources, the incidence of taxation and the high rate of consumption which are prominent aspects of the welfare state tend to lessen capital accumulation—particularly the kind of capital that is apt to be reinvested. It is true that in Canada, which did not previously possess a large and mobile reserve of capital, this condition meant that a very large part of our development, if it was to take place at all, had to be financed by foreign investment which carried with it increasing ownership of sources of production. The past few years have shown a continuation of the pattern in our foreign balance of payments. Although Canada's foreign trade shows a large deficit on merchandise account, the Canadian dollar remains at a premium due to a still larger net inflow of capital. A large amount of current trade has in the fact that although a large part of our imports are in capital goods which will add to future production, an increasing amount is in consumer goods. In other words, we are using imported capital which is increasing capacity to serve in order to finance part of our current consumption. This is like a man borrowing to finance day-to-day living costs, and we all know, there is a limit beyond which that cannot be continued.

A source of unemployment in 1957 was in those Canadian industries which depend on foreign products. Here, too, exports have tapered off sharply, although the long-term trend remains favourable. Unemployment appeared in manufacturing, where durable goods production over a wide range of products began falling off early in 1957. This decline in a year which had a history of industry can be attributed to an important degree to the pressure on the Canadian dollar which has substituted imports and served to displace both domestic production and employment. Perhaps under the changed economic outlook which we are experiencing, there will be a need for the monetary authorities to exercise through the money market an influence on the institutional part of the monetary unit to minimize this handicap both to domestic producers and to export industries.

There has been much public discussion about monetary policy as reflected in money supply and interest rates and its influence on the economy and as it is important to understand in this connection. While it is true that a restriction in supply of money available can limit expenditures it must be recognized that it is expenditure themselves and not the money supply that are directly linked to the volume of output and employment. Under conditions of declining demand and lowered expenditures money supply tends to be a central element in demand and selling to support an upward but powerless in fact to create it. It may not be magnanimous to add that there has been a great deal of unjustified and unwarranted criticism of what has been done, but it is a fact that over the past two years, there may be a diffusion of views as to the timing, nature and degree of monetary influences exerted by the authorities but one thing is clear: if all the money had been made available for which there was a demand, there would have been nothing and more mature and more well-judged criticism of monetary policy.

The year now closing has established a Gross National Product of more than $30 billion and we have and we have a number of reasons to be optimistic. We cannot expect to maintain this rapid pace of growth in the future, but we can expect to hold it to our basic inclination to grow. Not only does our developing and under-populated country, equipped with rich natural resources, have a basic inclination to grow but the flow is being continually reinforced by new sources of energy—hydro-electric power, petroleum, natural gas and in the years to come nuclear energy for which Canada is a member of the vast quantities of Canada. People live to consume more and more goods and services and the level of living is increasing as a result of the natural increase in population. By the year 1960 the rate of increase in output is expected to be $4,450,000,000 in products in increasing variety developed through scientific research—most of it conducted in large and more mature economies. It is, then, from which we gain benefit—such things as television, radio, refrigerators, plastics and electronics are examples not only of new products but of new industries.

There is every reason to be optimistic about the long-term outlook for Canada and in the short term there are no indications of any serious economic or social sources of outlook. If, however, we are to achieve success in the present and in the future, we must have wealth we shall have to pay close attention to providing the material and financial resources to support the growth and creative work, whether it be done through individual or corporate activity and enterprise.

J. P. R. Wadsworth, General Manager, reviewed the balance sheet, highlights of which are summarized, and said in part: The thirty-first annual statement shows total assets to have reached an all-time high of $2,511,095,000, an increase of $146,781,000 over the record figure of last year. Deposits grew to a new high of $2,048,481,000, an increase of $127,140,000. Personal savings increased by $51,476,000 and now total $1,164,217,000. These figures become more meaningful when it is realized that the Bank serves more than two million personal and business customers in 745 offices from Newfoundland to British Columbia and in addition 125 branches are operated abroad.

Commercial and other loans: $1,260,272,000 decreased by $16,000,000. Loans to Canada rose while loans to the United States declined. In the administration of the Bank's lending business, it has been and continues to be our policy to serve the welfare and economic needs of borrowers; customers both small and large, provided they meet our standards of sound ability.

The number of shareholders increased from 17,231 to 18,773 and the number of shares outstanding from 3,750,000 to 4,500,000.

Twenty-four new branches were opened in Canada and we have established a new branch in Nassau and a second branch in London, England, in September.

A report to the shareholders would not be complete without a sincere expression of appreciation to all members of the Bank's personnel. The results have been accomplished through a team effort in which each member has had a part to play. Changing conditions have required an increasing amount of individual responsibilities on the part of branch managers and officers.

It would also like to mention the important role played by the women in the Bank, and the increasing responsibilities that are being assumed by many of them. The part that they play is an important one and over the years to come they will undoubtedly assume greater responsibilities in the operation of the Bank's affairs.

The steady growth and development of the Bank provides increasing opportunities for the able young men and women who desire banking careers. Be it a high school or college graduate, the young man or woman who wishes to join the Bank will find that a banking career is rewarding not only in a tangible way, but in a sense of personal accomplishment. The profession presents a challenge to the young man who wishes to work and take advantage of opportunities that are afforded to study and to learn on the way up.

Under SPCA

Humane Death Costlier

Having a pet put to death at the city pound may soon cost more, but the death will be more humane, an SPCA official said yesterday.

Under a proposed agreement scheduled to come before city council Monday, the society will take over operation of the pound.

Fees for putting animals to death at the pound will be tripled to $1.50 for cats and $3 for other animals, but Page, secretary-manager of the Victoria SPCA, said that the method, but more expensive, methods will be used.

CARBON MONOXIDE
For years, he said animals had been put to death at the pound with carbon monoxide from vehicles.

"The SPCA, he said, uses an "euthanasia" to kill dogs instantly by electrocution, and a chloroform-carbon tetrachloride mixture to kill cats.

Important fees will remain unchanged in the proposal by law under which the SPCA will work, except that after the day of impoundment, there will be a housing fee of 50 cents a day for cats, rabbits and fish and $1 a day for other animals.

SELL, GIVE AWAY
The poundkeeper will have authority to sell, give away or put to death an impounded animal if it is not redeemed within 96 hours.

Under the proposed agreement, the society will provide service at least a day, seven days a week, in the city and the grounds from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and pound operation, and in the first year will pay the city $1,500. In the second year it will pay $2,000, and thereafter $2,500 a year.

Charter Night For New Club Set Saturday

A new Victoria service club, Serenata, will hold its charter dinner Saturday evening at the Pacific Club at 6 p.m.

While new to Victoria, Serenata is second only to Rotary in length of service in the United States. The name is made up of parts of the words, "Serenade to mankind."

Earl Ward will be president and Art Gaudin vice president, and the club will have an initial membership of 40.

The Victoria club has been organized as the result of a visit by Serenata councillor Keith Morrison of Kansas City. It is the third in Canada. Mr. Morrison said last night one already existing in Vancouver and one in Ontario.

Burglars Get Beer

Sellout Likely

VANCOUVER — Thirty burglar cases remain open in the city's second and third districts, but the police expect a sellout of the cases by the end of the year. The police expect a sellout of the cases by the end of the year. The police expect a sellout of the cases by the end of the year.

The Modern Cafe was also broken into Sunday morning and $100 worth of a quantity of property were stolen.
